APRIL NEWSLETTER

Dear Friend of Weantinoge,

The past month has been filled with profound change. COVID-19 has touched our lives in ways we never expected. As I write, I am thinking first and foremost of you and your loved ones. I hope you are healthy and well, and that continues.

While Weantinoge's offices are temporarily closed and April events postponed, our dedicated staff is busy planning virtual events, protecting and managing our natural and working lands, and supporting our partners. For a complete overview of our programming, please see our most recent Impact Report.

Despite the recent challenges, I have found reason to be hopeful and grateful. Natural lands are invaluable sources of comfort. I feel such appreciation for the lands and waters you have saved and help steward.

Around us in Northwest Connecticut, spring is resurgent. The herons are returning to their nesting grounds along the wetlands at our Alice McCallister Preserve in Kent . Wood frogs are calling out in vernals pools at our Mount Tom Preserve in New Milford. And, Weantinoge's agricultural lands, like our Smyrski Farm Preserve, have seen their first spring lambs. I have taken renewed pleasure in these observations and the solace our natural lands provide. I hope you are able to find time outdoors too, whether that is in your backyard or at one of our properties.

There are still significant challenges ahead. Everyone has been touched by the pandemic. As with most non-profits, we are anticipating reduced public support this year. If you are able, I hope you will consider a special gift as part of Give Local on April 21 and 22. There is more information about this once-a-year matching gift opportunity below.

The land you save is here for you today, tomorrow, and for the years to come. Thank you so much.

With gratitude,

Catherine M. Rawson Executive Director
